Abstract

The reconstruction conjecture is an open conjecture in graph theory that states that any two graphs on at least three vertices that have the same multiset of vertex-deleted subgraphs must be isomorphic. I use a natural lattice structure via a topological space on graphs to show that using a well-known theorem in order theory restricted to these lattices leads to a proof of the reconstruction conjecture for connected graphs.